Glucocorticoid secretion by dispersed rat islets of Langerhans in vitro. Cells in the head of the pancreas increased markedly when carbohydrate and protein in the medium were deprived. The enzyme secreted into the medium by the islets increased 7.4-fold when glucose and a specific amino acid mixture were replaced with glucose and maltose, a disaccharide form of maltose; with isoleucine, leucine, phenylalanine, and tryptophan, but decreased when lysine, alanine, or arginine was substituted. The effect of sulfhydryl reagents, dithiothreitol and iodoacetamide, and o-phenanthroline on glucocorticoid secretion were not consistent. When rat serum or rat liver extracts (added at 0.1 to 0.8%) were added, glucocorticoid secretion decreased, and mouse liver extracts increased it. On the other hand, the amounts secreted when peritoneal cells (0.1 to 5.0×10^5) or rat liver homogenate (8.9 mg protein in ml) were added increased with the cell number or protein content. When peritoneal cells (0.2×10^5) were combined with rat liver extract (8.9 mg protein) and cultured for 5 hr in the presence of 10 mM glucose, glucocorticoid secretion from the islets incubated with pancreatic homogenate increased nearly 4-fold. Glucocorticoid secretion from rat islets in vitro showed hyperbola characteristics in response to glucose, with the sensitivity for glucose dose in 1.5×10^5 islets being approximately 4.3 $\mu\text{mol/L}$. Chemoattractant cytokines and chemokines are important in the recruitment and activation of cells and are important mediators of inflammatory and immune responses. Chemokines are chemotactic cytokines that are released by a wide variety of cells to attract various cells of the immune system, including cells of the myeloid series, NK cells, T cells, B cells, monocytes, macrophages, dendritic cells, neutrophils, eosinophils, mast cells, basophils, megakaryocytes and endothelial cells. There are two major classes of chemokines, CXC-chemokines and CC-chemokines depending on whether the first two cy 3e33713323
