Background: Generic substitution (GS) of pharmaceuticals is widespread in low- and middle-income countries (LMICs), but it is unclear if GS with essential medicines leads to less medicine wastage.Objectives: To review the literature on the relationship between GS and medicine wastage.Methods: A systematic review. MEDLINE, CINAHL, Embase, PsycINFO and Cochrane Library were searched for published studies in LMICs from January 2009 to July 2017. The primary outcome was the effect of GS on medicine wastage.Results: Four studies were eligible for inclusion: one cross-sectional study and three prospective cohort studies with nine measurements. The outcomes from three studies were pooled into a meta-analysis, which showed that medicines lost to wastage were reduced by 12.5% (95%CI 5.5% to 19.9%, P

Neoadjuvant systemic treatment of submucosal colorectal cancer: state of the art and future directions. Neoadjuvant systemic treatment is routinely used in the management of colorectal cancers in the West. However, it is not used for submucosal (SM) cancers in the East. The aim of this article is to review the current evidences regarding the neoadjuvant treatment of SM colorectal cancers with systemic chemotherapeutic agents, more specifically combined chemotherapy and radiotherapy and explore promising innovative treatment options for this subset of patients.

Montgomery County seeks district judge for court of appeals vacancy The Montgomery County Republican Party has added two Montgomery County voters to their 2016 candidate list for one open seat on the court of appeals. Montgomery County would receive the two votes, according to the county's court of appeals website. The two voters on the list will be qualified voters who reside in the Montgomery County Court of Appeals district where they are on the Republican slate, officials said. Salmaan El-Yateem, who has been a registered Republican for more than 30 years, said he was considering asking the Republican Party to endorse him for the court of appeals since his opponent has a long history of "distorting the judicial system." "I'll look into it," he said. Bobby Scott, a retired judge, was appointed to the court of appeals by Gov. Robert F. McDonnell last year. He is up for re-election in November. His election was challenged by Domani A. Newton, who is running as a Democrat. In the first federal district court campaign, Kiara Copeland, who has been a registered Republican for 25 years, said the Democratic Party of Montgomery County asked her to run against Judge Peter Zaire, who has been on the bench for 20 years. Zaire was elected in 2007. Copeland said the reason she agreed to run was because Judge Zaire used his judicial power to oust elected officials from their county offices. "I am not in favor of that," she said. Copeland said she grew up in Montgomery County and her family has ties to the community. "I believe that I'm more fit to serve than Judge Zaire is," she said. The Montgomery County Republicans, who have the most registered voters in the county, have fielded seven candidates, according to party officials. Three are active duty members of
